NEW APPOINTMENTS TO STRENGTHEN OUTREACH

The appointment of Rev. John D. Cox and Rev. Murray L. Hicks to the Public Relations Department was announced recently by the Board of Directors. Both men are graduates of the College, Mr. Cox in the class of '52 and Mr. Hicks in '57.

Mr. Cox began his ministry at LCBM in August. During this month it was his privilege to contact and advise 157 young people throughout Ontario. In counselling sessions at five Bible Conferences, (Keswick, Elim Lodge, Youth for Christ at Glen Rocks, Muskoka Baptist and Fairhavens), the leading of the Lord was evidenced constantly in the decisions made by so many of our future leaders.

"Here at LCBM", Mr. Cox declares, "we watch with grateful hearts as the Holy Spirit continues to guide many of these young men and women to us for further training. The enthusiasm of these students is contagious and we praise Him for this foretaste of the blessings ahead, as more and more of our youth are investing their years of learning in preparing themselves spiritually and academically for the fields of service that God has appointed for them."

Mr. Hicks will come to London later this year.

He was born in Vienna, Austria, a member of the Jewish faith. His continuous study of the Scriptures led to his conversion while in a French prison during the last war. He is a M.A. graduate in Romance Philology from the University of Toronto.

By the time this reaches you, we of London College of Bible and Missions will have had our annual faculty retreat, at which I shall have reminded our faculty of our main objectives. I want to share them with you, that you may the more intelligently pray for us.

First is the glory of God. It is every man's duty to glorify God. Failure to glorify God is the essence of sin. Yet how few, even who bear the name of Christ, set that as their primary objective in life! A college has no right to the designation Christian if the glory of God does not permeate its activities as the dominant purpose. The men of Babel built, and still build, to get themselves a name, but we must build so as to enhance our Lord's name. When it is apparent that what is accomplished is God's doing, then He is glorified, and God will work in and through those who will not steal nor covet the glory.

Second is the making of saints. We fully acknowledge the sense in which all believers are saints. Even the carnal Christians of Corinth were called saints. We are given this "status" of saints in order that we may attain to the "stature" of saints. When our students come to us, they are saints at various stages of saintliness, and our responsibility is to promote their growth "in grace, and in the knowledge of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ." Some of them need to have their sense of right and wrong areatly sharpened. Some are lacking in thoughtfulness for others, or in submission to authority, or in stability, or in patience. It is not just a matter of improvement in one or two areas of character, however, but of having Christ formed in them. This, of course, lays heavy demands on faculty, staff and administration. We cannot lead the young people farther than we have gone ourselves.

Third is the furtherance of the Gospel. "Ye shall be witnesses unto me," said the risen Lord. Our aim is that the witness of Christ will flow through every life committed to our care, both while they are with us, and after they leave us. We must not be a little community hermetically sealed off from the city with its thousands of needy souls. There must flow out the rivers of living water, not only in the regular Christian service assignments, but in daily contacts. Then the furtherance of the Gospel must continue in the years to come and to all the world. Our motto here must be, "World evangelism through trained leadership." Some will go to the regions beyond in various branches of missionary service, some will occupy pulpits in the homeland, while some will carry the witness into the business and professional world — but all must be witnesses.

Then we come to the aim which too many put first, last and all the time — to develop scholars. I do not put it last because it is unimportant, but because nothing must be allowed to challenge the priority of the others, and because this must be regarded as a great conttributing factor in all the others. True scholarship will certainly glorify God more than shoddy academic procedures. True scholarship will give breadth and depth to character. True scholarship will arm our young people with a clear definition of the Gospel related to the thinking of today. In a Christian college scholarship must be superior, just because it is not an end in itself, but the servant of higher ends.

There will be specific aims within each department of our work, but they will all be pursued within the framework of these great primary objectives. We covet your prayers that our focus may be kept clear.
